$100,000 IN GOLD MISSING!

Startling Discovery Made by Adams Express Co. in Pittsburg.

EMPLOYEE DISAPPEARS

A Bank Had Delivered the Money to the Company and it had Been Receipted For

BY EDWARD GEORGE CUNLIFFE

Pittsburg, Oct. 11.--The startling discovery was made late yesterday that the Adams Express Company had been victimized to the extent of $100,000, supposedly through the speculation of an employee. The following official statement of the affair was given to the Associated Press last night.

"At 4:15 p. m. Monday, Oct. 9, a bank of Pittsburg, Pa., delivered to the Adams Express company at their office at 210 Wood street, Pittsburg, a package of currency containing $100,000. Of this amount $88 000 was in $100 bills, $10,000 in $50 bills and the remainder—$10,000—in $5, $10 and $20 bills.

"The $100 and $50 bills, issue of the Farmers' Deposit National Bank of Pittsburg and the Bank of Pittsburg, N. A., were in the main entirely new; some had been slightly used. The $5, $10 and $20 were old currency. The package containing this large sum of money was consigned to a bank in Cincinnati.

"The package was received and receipted for by Edward Geo. Cunliffe, who was then acting in the place of regular money clerk, who is ill.

"Cunliffe left the office at the usual time Tuesday morning when he failed to report for duty, a hurried examination was made of his department and it was learned that about $1,000 of funds entrusted to his care were missing. General Agent Hiner, of the Adams Express comprny, immediately called in detectives and placed the matter in their hands. Later developments brought to light the fact that in addition to the $1,000 missing the bank package containing the $100,000 had not been received at the money forwarding office at Union station this city.

"Inquiries made at his residence, No. 314 Lucerne street, West End, Pittsburg, showed that Cunliffe had arrived home at the customary time Monday evening and after changing his clothes bade his family good-by, saying to his wife that he was going out for the evening, and nothing further was heard from him.

"Cunliffe has been employed by the Adams Express company since March 1, 1904. Previous to that time he was employed in the Pittsburg service of the Adams Express Company, the Electric Express company and the United States express company, of Hartford, Conn., and bore an excellent reputation. He was methodical, accurate and an excellent clerk.

"Edward George Cunliffe is described as 35 years of age, looks to be 40; five feet seven inches tall; weighs 170 pounds; medium build; dark hair, heavily mixed with gray; wears a heavy, short cropped mustache, dark and partly mixed with gray; could raise a very fine beard; has blue eyes. When last seen he wore dark blue double breasted sack suit, a black derby hat, turned collar and a black bow tie. He wears a silver ring with an acorn design. He is an inveterate cigarette smoker and the second finger of his right hand is badly discolored with nicotine. Cunliffe is afflicted with what is known as the 'cigarette cough.' A warrant has been issued charging Cunliffe with larceny."

To Be Perfect Wife Don't Lie or Scold.

Rosebuds worn in the hair should always be part of the necessary equipment of the ideal wife, in an opinion expressed by the Rev. Richard A. Morley to the congregation of the Euclid Avenue Methodist Episcopal church of Oak Park, Chicago.

Other things the minister said were:

"The ideal wife is always truthful, never attempts to coerce her husband, always looks her best, never scolds and makes it her constant study to please him.

"An ideal wife never attempts to force or coerce her husband, but she realizes that she was created to be subject to him.

Continuing the description, Dr. Morley said in part:

"To be a wife at all is a great honor, but to be an ideal wife is a position and honor that angels might covet. When we speak of a wife we assume that she has those virtues and qualities essential to wifehood before she can enter into the realm of the ideal. That is, she is a woman before she is a wife. An ideal wife must be absolutely truthful to her husband. Most people will be untruthful by word or act under some circumstances, but it is unpardonable for a wife to lie to her husband."

SUFFERING WITH STIFF NECK.

Because of a Peculiarity Robert Gardiner May Escape Death Penalty.

THE COURT STARTLED

Prisoner is Charged With the Murder of Agnes Morrison and His Case is Remarkable.

HIS ATTORNEY MAKES A STATEMENT

Chicago, October 10.—Because of a peculiar freak of nature, Robert Gardiner a prisoner in the county jail here charged with the murder of Agnes Morrison, may escape the death penalty. When he was arrested in the court his attorney William Buckner, startled the court by turning to Assistant States Attorney Barbour and saying:

"This is a case where it won't do you any good to ask for the death penalty. They can't break this man's neck if they do try to hang him and you may lose him altogether by barging him and failing to execute the sentence in full."

It appears that the prisoner is suffering from ossification of the vertebra and the tissues of the neck. According to Professor Johnson, of Rush Medical college, only five cases similar have ever come to the notice of the medical profession. Gardiner, who was formerly a cashier, carries his head tilted forward and slightly twisted to one side. He is unable to move his head or incline it except with great effort and is hardly able to eat or speak owing to the effect of the ossification on the sympathetic membrance of the throat and bronchial tubes.

Attorney Buckner declares that the hardening of bone and tissue has proceeded so far that it would be impossible to bring any strain upon the patient's neck that would be sufficiently severe to cause any discomfort other than a slight straining of the muscles.

HAD HIS POCKET PICKED.

Jonathan Shaffer of Lock Haven the Victim.

Jonathan Shaffer, of Lock Haven, had his pocket picked Thursday evening while on the train between here and Milesburg Mr. Shaffer had been attending the County Fair and last evening boarded the train to go home. The cars were crowded and he could not get a seat. As he is well up in years he did not like the idea of standing all the way to Lock Haven, so he got off at Milesburg and staid all night at Kohlbeckers. He then discovered that a pocketbook containing several notes and valuable papers but no money had been stolen from him on the train. He carried it in his left hand pants pocket. In his right hand pocket he carried another pocketbook with money in it this was not taken.

Worrying about the papers he started to walk up the railroad track to Bellefonte this morning and when half way to town he found the pocket book along the track rifled of its contents. He also found another empty pocketbook lying along the track.

In the pocketbook Mr. Shaffer lost was a bank certificate for $400, and two notes given him by parties to whom he loaned money.

No Bounty on Wild Cats.

The Superior Court Monday decided that the law passed by the Legislature providing for the destruction of wild cats, foxes and minks in Pennsylvania, and offering bounties for the same is ineffective. The court holds that the title of the bill is defective and that there is nothing in the act to show who would pay the bounties. The case came before the court from Sullivan county and was a test case.

Eight thousand people attended the great Centre County Fair on Thursday, the big day, and everything passed off very successfully. On Wednesday there was probably 4,000 people on the ground. The Fair management are congratulating themselves on the beautiful weather and the large attendance. Friday witnessed another big crowd on the grounds and thus a successful week ended.

The chief interest at a county fair of course centers on the racing and the races were close enough to be exciting this year. The county race attracted the most attention on Wednesday. It was won easily by Henry Lowery, of Bellefonte. The summaries of the races are as follows:

The Centre County Fair was brought to a successful close on Friday with the second largest crowd of the week present, the attendance being about 5000. This is the first fair week in five years that was not marred by rain, and the management is well satisfied with the interest shown by the farmers in the large number of exhibits entered, as well as in the attendance.

The association will come out ahead of the game this year and are already planning for a larger amount of space next year for exhibition purposes.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

There was one serious accident happened to mar the closing of the fair. While a driver was warming up prior to the start of the free-for-all, Mrs. William Cartright and her sister, Mrs. Spurgeon McCauley, both of Bellwood attempted to cross the track and were knocked down. Mrs. McCauley was rendered unconscious but soon recovered while Mrs. Cartright was injured so badly that she was taken to the Bellefonte Hospital. Dr. George Harris was called to attend her at the Fair ground and had her sent to the hospital.

TRACK RECORD LOWERED.

"The Judge" owned by R. J. Gaffney, of Bedford, in the second heat of the free-for-all had the honor of lowering the track record from 2:16¼ to 2:13¾. It was a great performance and the crowd went wild with enthusiasm. The racing was good all through and everyone was pleased. Summaries.

New Department Store Promised Philipsburg.

The Central Trading company is about to open a fine department store in Philipsburg says the Ledger, to be called the "Bloomington," and for this purpose is fitting up a store room in the Odd Fellows' building. The company has rented for a long term of years all the available space in this building, we understand, for the proposed store and for offices for the coal companies interested in the new One Mile run field. The development of these new mines is giving Philipsburg quite a boom. These offices will be occupied by J. Edward Horn & Co., Stratton Bros., George Stott, J. C. Dunsmore, Peale, Peacock & Kerr, and the Central Trading Co. The results will be that the Odd Fellows' hall will become quite a business centre. S. E Troy will be manager of this new store.

Philipsburg is to be congratulated and will doubtless show its appreciation of the efforts made by these gentlemen by according them a liberal patronage.

Senator Peale has been in Philipsburg about a week, and has been busy organizing the new movement. The new branch railroad is rapidly being pushed to completion, and the coal shipments will begin next month, probably.

The Central Trading company is already proprietors of the following named stores—viz:

The Glen Rochey store, the Devling store, the Rathmel store, the Winburne store, the Munson store, the Decature store, the Emigh Run store, the Bloomington store, and will open stores at the new town of Clymer and at two other points in Indiana county, also one at Karthaus. Besides these there are three stores, one at Spangler, one at St. Benedict and one at Arcadia operated by the St. Benedict company, which may be added to the list.

These stores are operated for the convenience and comfort of the families of the mine workers and others in these several localities

Arsenic in Corpse, Young Widow Held.

Lorenzo Hamer's 18 year-old widow has been taken into custody, on suspicion of having caused his death by administering arsenic to him in his coffee. Hamer, who was a painter, died Sunday. Although his physicians thought he was suffering from lead poisoning, he insisted so vehemently that his wife had poisoned him by slow doses that an autopsy was decided on, and traces of arsenic have been found.

A peculiar feature of the case is that Hamer was nursed by his first wife, who was divorced from him three years ago, and who is now married to a man named Carroll. As soon as the painter fell ill, Mrs. Carroll declared that her love for him was not dead, and, with the permission of her husband, she went to the house to take care of him.

Hamer married his second wife shortly after his divorce. She was then only 15 years old, and she asserts that Hamer was brutal to her from the first. She had him arrested last September for beating her and he was fined $10.

It is asserted that she repeatedly made threats to get him out of the way. She tearfully denies that she poisoned him, and her appearance argues in her favor, for she is slight, pretty and childlike.

—Fourth Assistant Postmaster General DeGraw reported recently that there were 1,431 rural free delivery routes established throughout the country during September, making a total of 33,486 routes existing. There are 4,655 petitions for such routes pending.

FATAL WRECK ON SUNDAY!

Three Trainmen Killed on Lykens Valley Branch of the Penna.

DEBRIS ALSO TOOK FIRE

Bodies of Conductor Berry and Brakeman Hendershoft Burned Beyond Recognition.

MANY HORSES KILLED OR BADLY HURT

Millersburg, Pa., October 9.—Three men were killed, one man was injured and a carload of race horses were either killed or so badly hurt that they had to be shot, as the result of a collision on the Lykens Valley branch of the Pennsylvania railroad, a quarter of a mile south of this place, Sunday. The dead are:

Theodore Scott, Northumberland, fire man.

Ralph Hendershot, Northumberland, brakeman.

Charles E. Berry, Sunbury, freight conductor.

The injured man is Julius Lesh, of Sunbury, engineer, whose leg was crushed and body bruised. All the victims were married.

The collision was between the fast No. 3 Erie mail train, west-bound, and a caboose and box car containing a load of race horses. The mail train was bound from Harrisburg to Erie. It was preceded out of Harrisburg by a fast freight train, which, owing to a heavy fog, lost some time. The caboose and box car uncoupled at the junction of the Lykens Valley branch and the mail train overtook them. Berry and Hendershot were in the caboose when the crash came and were instantly killed. Fireman Scott, of the mail train, was hurled into the midst of the wreck and was also killed. Engineer Lesh, of the mail train, was thrown under the wreck of his engine. After the collision the wreckage took fire and the bodies of Berry and Hendershot were burned almost beyond recognition. The passenger engine left the track but did not upset. All the cars on the mail train remained on the rails. There were two hundred passengers on the mail train but none were seriously hurt.

During the excitement scores climbed through windows, fearing that they would be blown up and hurled into the Susquehanna, along which the railroad lies. The horses were bound for the Bloomsburg fair and belonged to several eastern horsemen.

Killing Rabbits out of Season.

The rabbit crop this year promises to be a large one. In some sections the frisky cottontail may be seen darting backwards and forwards across the roads as one drives along. The excess in some sections seems to have brought about some violations of the game law, which is unfortunate and should not be tolerated.

On several occasions during a week or so past the attention of this paper has been called to killing of rabbits out of season, by persons who believe that a line or so on the subject would have the affect of stopping the illegal practice.

The game laws are very plain. The open season for hares or rabbits is the month of November each year.

The enforcement of the game laws should be looked after by the respective townships. Any citizen has the right to prosecute for violation of the game laws and is entitled to one-half of all penalties recovered. Constables of the several wards, boroughs and townships of this commonwealth are ex-officio game wardens and have the same powers throughout the county as have the protectors appointed by the game commission. Constables are liable to fine and imprisonment where they neglect or refuse to enforce the game laws after their attention has been called to the matter in a prescribed form.

The Renewal a Strain,

Vacation is over. Again the school bell rings at morning and at noon, again with tens of thousands the hardest kind of work has begun, the renewal of which is a mental and physical strain to all except the most rugged. The little girl that a few days ago had roses in her cheeks, and the little boy whose lips were then so red you would have insisted that they had been "kissed by strawberries," have already lost something of the appearance of health. Now is a time when many children should be given a tonic which should avert such serious trouble, and we know of no other so highly to be recommended as Hood's Sarsaparilla, which strengthens the nerves, perfects digestion and assimilation, and aids mental development by building up the whole system.

Just What They are Doing Down on the Farm.

Jack Frost has given the crops ample time to ripen and the farmers are a grateful lot. They have about completed the work of threshing the buckwheat and now the corn cutting bees are in progress and are attended by the usual good and sociable times.

The rural schools have opened in all sections of the country and the attendance is large, in view of the fact that the fall farm work is so well along. The crop of winter apples will be a light one and indicates that the price will soar skyward before spring. Lovers of apples are therefore warned to lay in a good supply early. Pumpkins are strong this year and it is claimed that the crops are larger than for many years and it looks as though the apple pie exponent would have to content himself with pumpkin pie.

Potatoes, as previously stated, have rotted terribly in the lowlands. The price advances steadily and good ones are hard to find.

The honey bees have made but little progress this summer and the price of honey will likely be effected as a result of the bee strike. Most of the wheat has already been sowed.

A SMOOTH YOUNG SKIN.

The Method by Which One Woman Preserves Her Complexion.

A professional model whose complexion is of the classic type has this to say about her smooth skin and its treatment:

"I suppose I ought to say that I owe my complexion to soap and water; but, to tell the actual truth, neither soap nor water agrees with my skin very well. I seldom wash my face, vulgar as this may sound.

"I am accustomed to taking a cold bath every day, which is a matter of habit. It is good for some people and bad for others, but it agrees perfectly with me. I feel invigorated by it.

"In the natural course of events my face gets its dash of cold water, but otherwise I do not wash it except for a light steaming which it gets once in awhile, say once in ten days or so.

"At night I cover my face thickly with cold cream. I put it on in great layers. I let it remain on for a few minutes and then remove it with a soft cloth. I then apply another thick coating of cold cream, and this I leave on all night. It seems to sink into the pores and to supply the moisture which has been taken out of it during the day.

"You cannot expect to have a smooth young skin unless you use lots of cold cream on your face. You must experiment until you find the right kind of cold cream to use. If glycerin hurts your skin, do not use it. If you cannot stand rose water and alcohol, why, it is best to omit them. Discover the kind of cream you can use and stick to it. That is the way I did."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Concerning Seasickness.

Two congressmen, discussing the discomforts of travel, happened to brunch off on to the subject of seasickness. One of them said:

"Talk about seasickness, the fellow that traveled with me on my last European trip beat anything I ever met in all of my experience before. I tried all sorts of remedies on him, but without avail. He kept repeating, 'Oh, I am so sick, I am so sick.'

"Finally I cried out, 'Can't you keep anything on your stomach?'

"'Only my hands, Tom, only my hands.'"—Harper's Weekly.

Henry VIII. and Puddings.

Bluff King Hal, otherwise Henry VIII. of England, was exceedingly fond of puddings. At one time he gave a certain Mistress Cornwallis a house in Aldgate for herself and her heirs forever "in reward of fine puddings." In King Henry VIII.'s private accounts occur again and again entries of his rewards to different housewives for bringing him puddings. A typical instance runs thus: "Item. The same day paid to the wife that made the king podings at Hampton corte, vis. viijd." This would be about $1.75, but its value was much greater when the entry was made. This love for "fine puddings" explains much in the familiar rotund figure of King Hal.

A Matter of Gender.

The English language is supposed to be very simple in the matter of genders, but foreigners who triumphantly handle questions of gender of inanimate things in their own languages often have their difficulties with the English. A Frenchman recently came to grief over his English. "I fear I cockroach too much upon your time, madame," he remarked politely to his hostess. "En-croach, monsieur," she smilingly corrected him. He threw up his hands in despair. "Ah, your English genders!" he sighed.

SHOULD STAND BY THEIR PARTY

Best Way to Maintain National Republican Supremacy Is to Maintain Supremacy of Party Within the States.

United States Senator Philander C. Knox has emphasized the importance of Republican success in Pennsylvania this fall in a strong public interview referring to the political situation in the Keystone State.

Without any authority whatever some of the Lincoln Party adherents have been circulating reports that members of President Roosevelt's cabinet were in sympathy with their independent canvass, but it can be positively stated that the national administration is as eager for a great Republican victory in Pennsylvania this fall, as it is desirous of Republican success throughout the country.

Senator Philander C. Knox.

President Roosevelt wants a Republican congress elected next year to insure the carrying out of his policies and he is looking to Pennsylvania to furnish a big Republican delegation to the next congress. Senator Knox has frequent talks with the president and fully understands his views on this subject.

This is what Senator Knox has to say on the political situation and he said it with manifest candor and earnestness.

"I will vote the entire Republican state ticket in November and I believe it will be elected."

"I believe in electing Republicans to the state offices and that the Republican party should then see that they administer the offices faithfully and well.

"I believe the best way to maintain national Republican supremacy is to maintain the supremacy of the party within the state and to make the state's influence proportionate to its greatness, is in my judgment, to have the party meet the just and reasonable demands of the people for wise legislation and honest administration.

"I am satisfied that this is the view of the great majority of Pennsylvanians, and a great majority of Pennsylvanians are Republicans."

Thrashing by Electricity.

A novel thrashing scene recently occurred on the farm of August Broerman in the west part of Cuyahoga county, O., when George Heinfeld with his force of men continued thrashing grain for Mr. Broerman until 10 o'clock at night and all by the light of a number of electric lamps, the current for which was produced by a dynamo driven by the engine while the other machinery was being operated, says a special dispatch from Wapakoneta to the Cleveland Plain Dealer. An employee of the electric light plant at New Bremen installed the dynamo.

Simple.

She—Miss Stiffy had always vowed she would never marry. How did she happen to change her mind? He—Why, some one proposed.—Detroit Free Press.

Accessory For the Closet.

The bottom part of a closet is often little more than a catch-all for boots and dust. A good way to utilize the wasted space is to have a carpenter fit the lower part with frames which will hold two or three dressmakers' boxes. These may be bought from a box factory or from one's modiste. They are of heavy cardboard, and the top of the lid is arranged so that it may be lifted without taking out the entire box from the shelf. These boxes may be covered with cretonne and fitted with brass or nickel handles, to be bought at a hardware shop. The shelves which the carpenter has made for them will then come into service, and one may keep one's boots in the lower drawer and other belongings in the upper one. The wooden framework may be painted white or a darker color to make the cretonne ground.

The "Anticipation Box."

A fad among young society people is the "anticipation box." This is really a revival of the old custom of our grandmothers of collecting things, useful and beautiful, for the wedding trousseau or for the new home which is also anticipated. Into this box go various gifts that come to a girl from time to time and which will be appropriate at the time of her wedding. Pretty handkerchiefs, bits of rare lace, silver pieces, china, pictures, fine towels, table linen, pieces of hand embroidery, pieces of pretty lingerie, drawn work, sofa pillow covers and a host of other things find their way into the "anticipation box." As all these things will doubtless come into use some day, this is really a sensible fad after all.

TREACHEROUS PEAT BOGS.

A Grewsome Tradition About the Battle of Solway.

There is an ancient and grewsome tradition connected with the story of the battle of Solway. This battle was fought on the "debatable" borderland between England and Scotland in the year 1542. A troop of horsemen heavily mounted and heavily armored was put to rout. In the panic of their flight they ran headlong into a peat bog. The bog trembled beneath the feet of their chargers and opened and swallowed them, horses and horsemen, arms and armor. To support this tradition more than 200 years later, at the end of the eighteenth century, a digger of peat came upon one of the troop—a man and his horse, both in complete armor and preserved from total decay by the antiseptic qualities of the peat. Another story of that peat bog of the Solway frith is that in November, 1771, the bog, surcharged with the moisture of heavy rains, rose, swelled and burst like a torrent, sweeping along with it trees and houses and destroying thirty small villages.

Many thousands of acres of peat are found in the north German lowland. In Ireland estimates place the lowland bog area at 1,576,000 acres and the highland area at 1,254,000 acres. Russia is said to have 6,700 square miles of peat. Several million acres are in Norway and Sweden, France and Holland. The United States and Canada also have extensive tracts. Peat has been used by artisans for ages in the manufacture of tools. By burning peat the old steel workers produced the finest grades of iron and steel on account of the intensity of the heat produced and the absence of anything detrimental to the metal. The elastic and keen Damascus swords are believed to have been made by the use of peat.

Peat itself is the product which results from the partial decay of vegetable material—mosses and other marsh plants—which grows and dies in boggy places where the water stands. It is chiefly composed of sphagnum, or bog moss. This moss has peculiarly absorptive properties owing to the cuplike arrangement of its parts, which take up and hold water like a sponge. Sphagnum continues to grow after its roots have become detached from the ground. These two qualities explain why bogs occasionally slide from their old beds.

Prediction From Plummer's Home.

In commenting upon certain newspaper reports that have been printed in Democratic papers affecting the Republican candidate for state treasurer, Editor W. H. Schwartz, of the Altoona Tribune, says: "The Tribune wishes to remark that for some months past some small creature, supposed to live in this county, has from time to time been sending out telegrams to certain eastern newspapers interested in the downfall of the Republican party, all of which are pure inventions, and all of which are intended to convey the impression to distant readers that Hon. J. Lee Plummer, Republican nominee for state treasurer, is unpopular in his home county. In previous elections when Mr. Plummer was a candidate for the suffrages of his fellow citizens he always received a very complimentary vote. The Tribune, which is seldom mistaken concerning political results, now wishes to place on record the prediction that Blair county will give Mr. Plummer at the next election the largest majority ever given a candidate in an off year."

Plummer Stronger Every Day.

"The scheming Democrats, who hope to profit at the fall election in the state by the Philadelphia upheaval, are doing their level best to force the Republican nominee for state treasurer, J. Lee Plummer, off the ticket, but Republican State Chairman Andrews says Mr. Plummer will not only stay, but that he will be elected by the usual off-year majority," says the editor of the Chronicle and News, of Allentown. "The Democratic leaders betray their hypocrisy in trying to get Mr. Plummer off the ticket, for if he be as weak a candidate as the alleged reformers declare he is, isn't it logical to conclude that the Democrats would want nothing better than to keep Mr. Plummer on the ticket? As a matter of fact, Mr. Plummer has been strong from the very start, and is gaining in strength daily."

Furred Kettles.

A furred iron or copper kettle is easily cleaned. Place it empty over a clear fire for a short time. This will loosen the chalky deposit, which can then be removed. To prevent the kettle from furring again keep a large marble in it or an oyster shell will answer the same purpose.

No better man than Lincoln A Swartz was ever nominated for County Treasurer. See that he gets your support.

By supporting the Republican county ticket the best service will be guarantee in the transaction of the public business.

The all around excellence of the Republican county ticket renders it proof against criticism. Every man is worthy the public confidence.

The office of County Commissioner is of the highest importance. The incumbents of this position transact all the administrative business of the county. All the greater reason why Messrs. Bailey and Miller should be elected.

What does it matter to the taxpayers of Centre county if our present County Commissioners, Abram V. Miller and John G. Bailey, have their expenses paid by some one else while on a little vacation, about which the Centre Democrat, of Bellefonte, is blowing so much? What do the people care as long as they do not have to foot the bill?—Philipsburg Bituminous Record.

A GOOD TICKET.

The first requisite in a public official should be competency, and this same requisite should be demanded of every candidate for office. As a matter of fact mere political partisanship is a very secondary consideration to competency, and it should be so regarded. We believe a voter should vote his party ticket at all times, unless his party is represented on the ticket by candidates who are known to be wholly unfit and incompetent, It is the duty of every voter to ascertain the qualifications of the candidates on his ticket. Having done this and found them all right in this respect, he should vote his party ticket from top to bottom.

There is no need for the voter in Centre county to inquire this fall into the competency of any candidate on the Republican ticket. All of the men on the ticket are too well known to require any inquiry. Every one is so well qualified for the office for which he is a candidate that inquiry is altogether useless. From the head of the ticket down to the last man they are men upon whom no vote will be wasted. With them filling the county offices the public service will not only be maintained at its present high standard, but, if possible will be improved.

There is no reason why any Republican should do otherwise this fall than vote his full ticket.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

The office of County Commissioner is in many respects the most important in the county. The gentlemen who fill this position transact all the fiscal business of the county, let the contracts and in all other ways make the expenditures of the public fund. If they are good and capable men the resources of the taxpayers will be applied to the best advantage, but if they should happen to be men not possessed of the proper business ability or careful judgment there is likely to be a waste of the people's money.

In Messrs. A. V. Miller and John G. Bailey there is no doubt of their full and complete qualifications. They are men possessed of the best of judgment, of keen business sagacity and a thorough knowledge of the public needs. There is no taint surrounding their reputation, either public or private. Both have the advantage of having served one term and the people have full confidence in him.

The indications are that both these excellent candidates will be elected in November. Give them the benefit of your support.

Hustling the Clergy.

A western newspaper man once connected with a journal in Denver was one day in conversation with his chief when a clerical looking gentleman entered the office.

"Sir," said he gravely, "I intend next Sunday to preach a sermon upon football, and it has occurred to me that an enterprising paper like yours would be pleased to have my manuscript. I have no doubt that any number of your readers would be glad to read it and"—

"All right, all right," interrupted the busy editor, "but you'll have to hustle it along. Get it in early—early, mind! Our sporting page is the first to close."—Harper's Weekly.

The Salt In the Ocean.

If the ocean did not have salt it would freeze somewhat, more readily than it does now, but there would be no very marked difference. The ocean is prevented from freezing not so much by its salt as by its size and by its commotion. On account of its size large portions of it extend into warm climates at all seasons, and by reason of its great depth it is a vast storehouse of heat. Its currents distribute much warm water among the cold.—St. Nicholas.

Wealth of Words.

"He talks very interestingly," said one girl.

"Yes," replied the other, "but in all the stories I ever read the man who used lovely language was always poor and struggling. It doesn't seem a good sign to me."—Washington Star.

An Angel Once.

"Does it create a furore in your family when you go home late?" asked Bjones of his friend De Smith.

"No; it creates a fury," was the suggestive answer.—Chicago Record-Herald.

An Ideal Medicine.

MISS LOUISE MATHER, 13 Church St., Burlington, Vt., Vice-President Bureau of Exchange, writes:

"Your medicine is an ideal woman's medicine and by far the best I have known to restore lost health and strength.

"I suffered for several years. My back ached, I had bearing down pains, and frequent headaches.

"I would often wake from sleep in such pain that I would suffer for hours before my eyes would close again. I dreaded the long nights as well as the weary days.

"I consulted two physicians, hoping to get relief. Finding that their medicine did not seem to cure me, a friend advised me to try Peruna.

"I am certainly glad that I followed her advice, for Peruna was the only medicine for me. Every ache and pain disappeared in four months and I am in perfect health now.

"My earnest advice to suffering women is to try Peruna, for I feel sure they will not be disappointed in it."—Louise Mather.

Enjoying Splendid Health.

Mrs. L. E. Tyler, Santa Monica, Cal., Secretary Santa Monica Musical Society, writes:

"I was troubled for over three years with systemic catarrh, complicated by female weakness and inflammation.

"This induced frequent headaches, nervousness, hysteria and sleeplessness, which nothing could relieve until I tried Peruna.

"I began to feel better after I had taken the first bottleful and improved from week to week until at the end of about eleven weeks I was entirely well.

"I am pleased to say that I have enjoyed splendid health now for nearly a year. I have a fine appetite, enjoy sound sleep and do not suffer from any more headaches or other pains."—L. E. Tyler.

Completely Regained Her Health.

Miss Edith Reams, 726 North Main St., Dayton, O., writes:

"I suffered for some time with both lung and female troubles.

"I had been under the treatment of a good physician for about nine months without obtaining any relief, when Peruna was recommended to me. After taking twelve bottles of this medicine I have completely regained my health.

"I am pleased to recommend Peruna to any one suffering from the above ailments."—Edith Reams.

America is the Land of Nervous Women.

The majority of women are nervous because they suffer from some form of female disease.

The greatest obstacle in the way of recovery is that they do not understand that catarrh is the main source of their illness.

Women who are in doubt as to their ailments should write to Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O. Give him a full description of your symptoms, previous treatment and age.

ALL REFORM PLEDGES HAVE BEEN BROKEN

Mayor Weaver Orders Police and Firemen to Work Against the Republican Ticket.

TAXPAYERS ARE INDIGNANT

Gordon, a Democrat, Directs the Pay Roll For Politics and the Wanamaker Newspapers Suppress or Distort the News to Suit the Purposes of a Guerilla Combine.

[Special Correspondence.]

Philadelphia, Oct. 10.

With the mask removed from the so-called reform party in this city, Republicans everywhere cannot but be disgusted with the revelations of hypocrisy, treachery and deceit, and they are going to the polls to cast an emphatic vote of condemnation of the new political combine which is seeking to wreck the Republican party in Philadelphia.

Mayor Weaver is no longer taken seriously in his public statements and he has ceased to have the respect of men who are familiar with the political intrigue which has been under way in this city since Weaver deserted the Republican colors and took his entire administration over to the Wanamaker-Gordon-Van Valkenburg camp, which has for years been the refuge of insurgents and party traitors of all classes and conditions.

A Deep Laid Scheme.

The City Party which was started by some well-meaning citizens, who were sincerely desirious of reform, has been captured by the Wanamaker-Gordon-Van Valkenburg combine, and it no longer stands for anything which its original promoters contemplated. Like the Lincoln Party in the state, the City Party has become an asset of Wanamakerism and is being used in a desperate campaign to disrupt the Republican party to further the game which the Wanamaker politicians have in mind for the future.

James Gay Gordon, Democrat, for governor, and John Wanamaker, of doubtful political standing, for United States senator, is the program on the cards of the men who are manipulating the City Party in this city and the Lincoln Party in Pennsylvania.

As in previous campaigns when the rear by Wanamaker guerrillas and attempts were made to defeat good Republicans, regularly and honestly nominated in accordance with the rules and regulations of the party, the rank and file of the Republican organization stand true and steadfast and are prepared to beat back the insurgent crew to defeat and dismay at the coming election.

In the other Wanamaker campaigns the Republican party was confronted with the most lavish expenditure of money to promote dissension and discord in its ranks and to strengthen the Democratic allies of these insurgents.

Public Opinion Is Defied.

On every hand there is seen today the same evidence of the use of money to further the schemes of the men who are striving to defeat the Republican candidates, but there is now the additional power of the Weaver administration being exerted with a most flagrant disregard of public pledges of reform and a most defiant spirit of indifference to popular sentiment.

"The full power of my administration" are the words that come to the lips of every Republican citizen of the Quaker City when he reads of the disgraceful exhibitions of police and firemen engaged in political work and recalls the sensational speech made by Mayor Weaver when, in addressing a mass meeting in the South Broad Street Theatre, he announced that he had deserted the Republican party, and that "the full power of my administration" would be arrayed against the candidates on the Republican ticket.

Since then Mayor Weaver has spent much time with former Judge Gordon, Democrat, and E. A. Van Valkenburg, Wanamaker's political manager in Wanamaker's North American building, in consultation regarding the use of the "power of my administration" to serve the ends of Wanamakerism.

Gordon and Van Valkenburg are Weaver's most regular callers at his public office. It is an open secret that former Judge Gordon is the political dictator of the Weaver administration, and that what he says "goes."

Gordon a Reckless Politician.

With that recklessness which has characterized Judge Gordon's career, both while on and off the bench, the Weaver administration is today amazing and startling the citizens of Philadelphia with the daring and boldness of its actions.

Orders are being issued to the policemen over the lieutenants' desks in the police station houses for them to turn in against the Republican party.

Caucuses are being held in every ward in the city, composed of office-holders of the various departments under the Weaver administration and at which the policemen and firemen predominate. Campaign assessments are there levied to further the cause of the Weaver-Gordon-Wanamaker party and to plan for the formation of John Weaver Marching Clubs made up of city employes, to turn out in parades in the interest of the candidates of the City Party.

At these caucuses police lieutenants and sergeants are among those who address the employes of the city, all of them Republicans, and tell them that they must turn in for the City Party ticket, as their "bread and butter" is at stake.

These are the exact words used by one of the police lieutenants who spoke to his men in a station house.

The orders to the lieutenants to do this come directly from the city hall and are given with the full knowledge of Mayor Weaver. The lieutenants have not their hearts in the work, but are simply obeying orders.

Policemen are being used to canvass election precincts against the Republican ticket. They are detailed in full uniform to deliver calls for these meetings to the other city employes.

Policemen are employed in the distribution of campaign buttons for the City Party, and the police patrol wagons are used to deliver boxes of these buttons.

Cabinet Officer Issues Orders.

A member of the mayor's cabinet, Director Shoyer, nightly makes his headquarters in the police station house in the Nineteenth ward, and gives instructions to Republicans employed under the city administration to work and vote for the City Party ticket.

City employes in every department of the Weaver administration are being assessed to defray the expenses of the City Party campaign.

Where Republican office holders under the mayor refuse either to work for the City Party ticket or give part of their wages to go into its treasury, they are discharged without further notice.

While the Republicans who are so unfortunate as to hold place under Mayor Weaver are being intimidated and terrorized in the campaign to wreck the Republican organization in the interest of Wanamakerism, the Wanamaker owned and controlled or subsidized newspapers are directing their batteries, as usual, against every man who has the courage to disregard their attacks and speak in favor of the Republican ticket.

Never in the history of Philadelphia has there been such a damnable condition of affairs from a journalistic standpoint.

Wanamaker interests dominate and control the Democratic Philadelphia Record; Wanamaker's son, "Tom," owns the North American, and Wanamaker's son-in-law, Wharburton, owns the Philadelphia Evening Telegraph.

The Philadelphia Press, which for years followed Wanamaker in his insurgent political campaigning when Wanamaker sought to obtain the seat occupied by the late Matthew Stanley Quay in the United States senate, and also tried to become United States senator when Penrose was first elected, is again lined up with the guerillas and is fighting the Republican candidates with what little influence it has left.

A Newspaper Trust's "Hold Up."

The remarkable spectacle is presented in Republican Philadelphia of the candidates on the Republican ticket being compelled to pay, at advertising rates, for the publication of their letters of acceptance of the nominations of the Republican party.

To get the most ordinary mention of matters of interest to Republicans in the subsidized or Wanamaker controlled or owned newspapers, it is necessary to go with cash to the business office of the papers.

A number of leading manufacturers and business men have subscribed a fund to meet this extraordinary expense of the campaign for the Republican ticket. These newspapers, which are suppressing news of interest to Republicans and which would be calculated to aid the Republican cause, are opposing the Republican state ticket as well as the local candidates.

They are suppressing the news regarding the police in politics and the firemen in politics.

They are distorting the facts in every matter in which Mayor Weaver is concerned so as to play him up in the light of a great reformer and public benefactor.

They opposed the legislation before councils calling for the deepening of the Delaware river channel, while Mayor Weaver opposed it. Owing to the firm and positive stand of the Republican leaders and councilmen, this proposition finally passed councils, and Weaver finally felt obliged to sign the bill which he sought to defeat. These newspapers then gave the credit to the mayor, whereas he was absolutely entitled to none, for it was the Republican leaders who made this condition of affairs possible.

These newspapers are now trying to make it appear that Mayor Weaver is to be congratulated and thanked by the citizens who fought for the abolition of grade crossings, whereas he should be denounced for his hostility to the ordinance which was passed by councils and which he vetoed.

The Republicans in councils, refusing to bow to the mayor, and recognizing popular sentiment, passed the bill over his veto. When it became a law despite him, the mayor came out in a flambouyant statement in favor of [illegible] grade crossings and asking the citizens to vote for the loan to provide the money to abolish this evil. This was done in an attempt to take credit from the Republican party.

Any sane man would have remained quiet, but Mayor Weaver, relying upon the Wanamaker newspapers to give him the best of it and distort the facts to serve his purposes, turned somersault and completely changed front.

The Wanamaker newspapers have since been trying to make it appear that Weaver is entitled to praise from the citizens of Richmond, Kensington and the Twentieth ward, who demanded the abolition of grade crossings.

But they have not fooled the people.

AN IRISH TYPE.

The Placid, Well Born Girl of the Little Green Isle.

"The Irishwomen never worry," said a woman who has mixed much in the upper circles of the little green isle; "therefore they preserve their youth better than the women of any other nation. A peculiar type of personality has been left in Ireland. England and America have drained off the progressive and hustling—England from the upper classes, America from the lower. Those who are left are of a placid, contented type, from whom the restlessness of present day civilization seems far removed. The dullness of the life led by the average well born Irish girl would be pathetic if it were not that she seems to thrive so well on it. Year after year she follows the same monotonous round, meeting the same people at tennis in summer or hockey matches in winter. If her home is in a hunting district, no matter at how low an ebb the family finances may be, they will manage to give her a good mount, but for the girls who do not hunt the long, wet winter, with few neighbors and few books, passes almost as drearily as in a mediaeval castle."—New York Tribune.

St. Fiacre.

There is a pretty bit of history in the name of that vehicle, the fiacre. St. Fiacre was an Irishman of noble birth, who went over to France in the seventh century and lived as a hermit in a forest near Meaux. His popularity became very great in the France of later centuries. When Sauvage started public hackney coaches in Paris in 1640 he found the most convenient center for them to be an inn in the Rue St. Martin, named Hotel St. Fiacre and adorned with an image of the saint; hence "fiacre."

His Mission.

Old Mortality was freshening up the illegible inscriptions on the ancient tombstones.

"I merely wish to show," he explained to the curious bystanders, "that there is nothing essentially new in modern fiction."—Chicago Tribune.

Bold Robbery,

A gang of thugs and thieves are operating in Northern Cambria county and have the residents in that vicinity terrorized. Another atrocity has been committed and numbered among the stirring events that have brought the mountain town of Carrolltown into the lime light. The latest crime was a bold robbery perpetrated near St. Benedict Monday night while Charles Miller and his wife were sleeping soundly in their home. Burglars gained entrance to the building and administered chloroform to the sleeping victims and then looted the house of $350 in cash, some silverware and other valuables. A man who boarded with Mr. and Mrs Miller was asleep in another room and he, too, was put under the influence of the drug. After securing everything else of value in the house, including $1.50 from the clothes of the boarder, the burglars, not satisfied with what they had found, removed Mrs. Miller's wedding ring from her finger and departed, leaving their victims to sleep off the effects of the drug. Mr. Miller and his wife have been married but a short time. The ring is said to have contained a valuable diamond. Mr. Miller conducts a poolroom at St. Benedicts. There is no clue to the robbers.

BABES IN THE WOOD.

A Seventeenth Century Incident In the State of Maine.

In 1679 James Adams of York became affronted with one of his neighbors, Henry Simpson, and determined to avenge himself upon two of Simpson's children, whose ages were six and nine years. In a solitary place four or five miles from the dwelling houses of the inhabitants he built of logs beside a ledge of perpendicular rocks a pen or pound several feet high, with walls inclined inward from bottom to top. After he had built this he decoyed the children into the woods under a pretense of searching for birds' nests and caused them to enter within the pound, where he left them confined to perish. The place has since been called the Devil's Invention.

The children were soon missed, and the alarmed inhabitants searched for them more than forty-eight hours. The boys, when aware of their wretched situation, made various attempts to get out, and at length, by digging away with their hands the surface of the earth underneath one of the bottom logs, effected their escape. They wandered in the woods three days, being at last attracted to the seashore by the noise of the surf, where they were found.

The depraved criminal was condemned to have thirty stripes well laid on, to pay the father of the children £5, the treasurer £10, besides fees and charges of the prison, and remain a close prisoner during the court's pleasure or till further order. The same month he recognized before two of the judges, "conditioned to send him, within twenty-one days, out of the jurisdiction."

First Bear of Season Killed on Wallis Run.

A man named Hilemen, in the Wallis Run district, is reported by returning gunners to be the first to kill a bear this season says the Williamsport Sun. And his experience was somewhat unusual and exciting. Local sportsmen who have been in the woods say that the leaves are too thick on the trees for successful bear hunting, and that several killing frosts will have to come before the sport with bruin is in good trim. There are numerous signs of bear, and the probability is that November will see the killing of quite a number of the big game.

The Wallis Run bear was a chance catch. Hileman spied the chap munching acorns about forty yards away. The noise of a tumbling stream nearby prevented the bear hearing him, and he had also the advantage of being to windward, so that the bear's scent was non effective. Hileman had a double-barrel gun, but had only shot ammunition. Nothing daunted, however, he let drive at thirty yards, and the bear, evidently peppered into a condition of ugliness, turned and started toward him, champing its jaws with a fierceness that boded no good for the squirrel hunter. Hileman waited for a ten yard range and then gave the advancing bear the second charge. This time bruin halted and began pawing his face, the full charge evidently having struck him in the head. A few moments later, when he attempted to navigate, Hileman, who had reloaded, saw that the poor fellow was evidently blind, the shot having destroyed his eyes. He tried to escape, but bumped against trees here and there, and Hileman slipped up behind him and shot him back of the left shoulder killing him almost instantly.

Benefits of Newspapers.

Speaking of what a newspaper does for community, United States Senator David Davis, of Illinois, made an address that remains ever green in the memories of newspaper men. He said:

Every year every good local paper gives from 500 to 5,000 free lines for the benefit of the community in which it is located. No other agency can or will do this. The editor in proportion to his means does more for his own town than any other man. He ought to be supported not because you happen to like him or admire his writing, but because the local paper is the best investment a community can make. It may not be crowded with great thought, but financially it is of more benefit than both preacher and teacher. Today editors do more for less pay than any man on earth. Patronize your home paper, not as a charity, but as an investment.

Should be Encouraged.

A man should not be punished for beautifying his property, says an exchange. Assessors sometimes do that very thing. A man paints his house; in the spring the assessors come around, admire the scheme, and quickly raise the valuation $200. Or a man lays a cement walk to replace a plank walk; as a rule the same fate awaits him when the assessors see it. Such a course is wrong. A property owner should be encouraged to beautify his property and improve his neighborhood.

Black Hand Society.

The notorious Black Hand society is after Nelson Hoover, a son of Edward Hoover, who is well-known in Millheim, Nelson's mother being a former resident of that place. The following is taken from last week's Lewisburg Chronicle:

"Considerable excitement was caused in Sunbury on Monday when it was learned that members of the notorious Black Hand society, which organization is charged with a number of the recent unsolved murders in the county, had left a message threatening a young man who the society has made two attempts to murder. Miss Hattie Hoover, with whom Nelson Hoover, a relative boards, found the message pinned to the wall of the kitchen of her home. Upon the card a hand had been drawn in black, along with skull and cross-bones, with the warning "Beware," and the figure three. Those who placed the message where found gained an entrance to the house through a window. During the last four months unknown persons made two attempts at Shamokin to kill Hoover. The first time he was stabbed and the second time he was shot in the arm. While recovering from the last attack in the hospital in Sunbury Hoover received a letter threatening his life if he returned to Shamokin. If Hoover knows why a persistent effort is being made to kill him, he will not say, but is living in constant fear that he will be killed."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co. Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

CASTORIA.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know it.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

Home of Swamp-Root.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghampton, N. Y., on every bottle.

COSTLY DISHES.

Dining Services of Solid Gold and Dishes of Rare China.

I happened to be in Tiffany's and asked one of the head men if it is true that people really eat off gold plates.

He smiled and, turning to a young man, said, "Bring me an after dinner coffee set."

And presently the young man returned with a small tray holding three small pieces. They were gracefully fashioned and looked like gold. And the tray looked like gold.

"What do you think they are?" asked the head man.

"Silver gilt," I suggested.

"Hold it," he said and put the service in my hands.

"It's heavy," said I, "but—it can't be solid gold."

"That's what it is," he assured me and pointed to the mark. "These four pieces—the tray, the coffeepot, the cream pitcher and the sugar bowl—are eighteen carat gold, solid. The price is $3,000."

Not only is it true that a number of millionaires in America own plates of solid gold or silver gilt (which latter is considered good enough for European royalty), but there are rich families who boast sets of china costing from $3,000 to $5,000 a dozen, so that the breaking of a single plate means the loss of several hundred dollars.—Success.

A Doctor's Dilemma.

Among the papers of R. H. Stoddard that Ripley Hitchcock edited there is a letter which Oliver Wendell Holmes, the poet-physician, is said to have received. This letter was written many years ago by an ignorant country practitioner, and it is interesting because it shows the low level to which, in the early part of the last century, it was possible for medical education to fall. The letter, verbatim, follows:

Dear dock I have a pashunt whose physicol sines shoze that the winpipe is ulcerated of and his lung hav dropped into his stumick. He is unabel to swaller and I fear his stumick toobe is gone. I have giv him everything without effek his Father is wealthy henble and influenshul. He is an active member of the M. E. church and God noes I don't want too loose him wot shall I do?

matrimony and theology.

Matrimony should end all doctrinal quibbles. If the man happen to be born a pagan and the woman something else, let them compromise their differences and become, both of them, of the same faith. Let them cast lots if there be no other way.—From "The Bishop's Niece," by George H. Picard.

Happy Schooldays.

The Parson—Well, my boy, you seem in a great hurry to get to your school today. Boy—Yes, sir. Bill Jones is going ter git a bird of a licking this morning for playing bookey, and don't want to miss it.—Puck.

Convenient Dish Drainer.

Dishwashing is one of the greatest trials of the housekeeper, and any convenience that will expedite this tri-daily task and make it easier is eagerly sought. The particular housewife insists upon a thorough rinsing of the dishes after they have been washed, and for this purpose two dishpans are usually employed, thus necessitating a double thrusting of the hands into hot water, one of the most disagreeable features of the whole operation. A St. Louis housewife has adopted a dishwashing contrivance consisting of a supporting frame for the kitchen sink. It is a wire framework, with transverse strands to give rigidity and strength, the ends of which members are bent or turned downward to form supporting legs. When the dishes have been washed, instead of being placed in a second pan and so rehandled they are placed on this wire frame and rinsed, either by turning on the hot water spigot or by being drenched by means of a dipper.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Bead Lamp Shades.

Those who have an inclination to do bead work, though not knowing enough about it to attempt the handsome bags and purses, will no doubt be pleased to go into shade adorning. Candle shades are simplest. The shade proper is made of little medallions or other forms so shaped that they will fit together. Each bead is strung on wire. One color effects are safest for the beginner. Another idea is to simply make a fringe for a shade. The beads used should be exactly matched to the shade. These tiny beads are not colored, but are rather lined with a color, the color being put in where the bead is pierced. For a candle shade the fringe should be made thus: Make a wire circle the size of the shade. Cover it with tape. String beads to a length of two and a half inches and sew them to the covered wire close together. It is well to have a number of needles threaded at once. In making fringe for a lamp shade the depth varies according to the size of the shade.

Fooled.

A regiment of soldiers was drawn up for church parade in the barrack square, but the church was being repaired and could only hold half of them.

"Sergeant-major," shouted the colonel, "tell all the men who don't want to go to church to fall out on the reverse flank."

Of course a large number quickly and gladly availed themselves of the privilege.

"Now, sergeant-major," said the colonel, "dismiss all the men who did not fall out and march the others to church; they need it most."—London Standard.

CALIFORNIA

Do you want to live where the climate is mild the year round—where labor is never oppressed by stress of weather, and where animal vitality is never lost by mere conflict with cold?

Do you want to live in a region where the resources are more varied than in any other equal area in the world, where the division of great ranches affords a fine opportunity to get a small farm that will assure you a competence?

Do you want to live where, with a minimum of labor, you can grow profitable crops of grapes and small fruit, oranges, lemons, olives, prunes and almonds, alfalfa and grain, where crops are sure, business is good and capital easily finds profitable investment?

Then go to California, where both health and opportunity await your coming.

The Chicago, Union Pacific and North-Western Line is the most direct route to the Pacific Coast, and there are two fast through trains daily via this line, over the famous double-track railway between Chicago and the Missouri River.

Special low round-trip rates are in effect via this line throughout the summer to various Pacific Coast points, and colonist low rate one-way tickets will be on sale during September and October, which give an unusual chance for settlers to make the trip at a minimum of expense.

Daily and personally conducted excursions are operated through to San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Portland without change, on which a double berth in a Pullman tourist sleeping car from Chicago costs only $7.00, via the

A Question Of Caste

....By MARTHA FISHEL

Copyright, 1904, by Martha Fishel

IN the florist's window a bunch of orchids of a rare green gray hue flaunted their imperial beauty in the face of a family of roses of different complexions, white tulips and yellow jonquils. Every head nodded attentively on its stem. It was evident the orchids had something important to impart.

"We've just been bought for Ruth Delorme. She's the only American we would care to have own us," they drawled. "She's the season's beauty, which is the best we can expect in this parvenu country, where there's not a title in sight unless it's borrowed. We will say goodby to you all very soon. No doubt we'll be taken to a dinner and the opera and perhaps look in at a couple of dances. That's the life we are meant for. It's so stupid here, ogled at through the glass by people one couldn't really know."

"Oh, how lovely! And we are so glad for you. But we wonder who will buy us."

The orchids could not imagine for a moment where the little sighing whisper floated from, but after a surprised circular gaze they saw resting against the base of the jade bowl which held them a bunch of wood violets in a goblet.

Offended surprise made them gasp, and, leveling the insolent stare which only the socially secure permit themselves, their petals assumed scornful curves.

"Well, upon my word! So much for your moth eaten reputation for modesty! If this isn't underbred familiarity, what is it? Wild, untrained creatures without a cent.

"Some well meaning, badly groomed clerk will doubtless take you home to his dowd of a wife," the aristocrats continued.

"That will be nice if we can make her happy." And the drooped blue heads nodded wistfully.

"A plebeian ambition rightly suited to your station," said the orchids. "We'll be glad to leave this place," they whispered to an American Beauty rose in a tall cut glass vase. "The society is so mixed! Think of them daring to address us! We're not at all in the same set! Those weeds are not even of the English species or the double sort.

"OH, BUT, I SAY, WHAT'S THIS?"

They're not even distantly connected with the Italian family. We know the Parmas well."

"No; we make no claims at all," the violets replied. "We were plucked this morning on the banks of the Bronx."

"The Bronx! Heavens! It sounds so bourgeois, suggestive of cheap table d'hotes and suburban villas!"

"Oh, we know we're cheap," said the violets, stung to revolt.

"Cheap? Well, rather! Twenty-five cents for how many of you?"

"A hundred."

The orchids laughed.

"And not very particular about the counting, eh? There are only six of us, and we cost $8. Well, here's the clerk coming for us. We're off, thank heaven! Goodby, Miss Bronx."

"Petal proud things, I'm glad they are gone," said one violet, angry dew in its eyes.

"So are we," said the tallest American Beauty in the jar. "Far be it from me to decry family. I'm proud of my own branch, but those orchids talk too much. Thank heaven, we can all get an afternoon nap now."

They were roused by the door opening as a man entered. He was handsome and young, though somewhat haggard, as if from loss of sleep. If his clothes were somewhat shabby they were well cut, and he carried them with easy grace.

"I like his face," said each little violet to the other as they preened and drinked their petals while eying the stranger, who was fingering some loose change in his pocket, a quizzical smile on his lips.

"You florists are a species of highway robber," he laughed to the clerk. "Have you any violets not worth their weight in gold?"

"Not a violet in the place. Every one went before noon. The matinee girls just made a raid on them."

The violets felt their hearts sink.

"I wonder what he calls us—cabbages?" murmured one of the little bunch, still sore from the orchids' taunts.

The young man regarded with a dubious air the flowers heaped about so prodigally.

"Oh, but, I say, what's this?" as he caught sight of the violets that seemed to have deepened in hue in their efforts to be seen.

"Oh, would you want those—that is, we hardly expect to sell them to our patrons. We bought a lot of them as a sort of charity from a little lame girl in Bronxville and should probably have given them away to a footman or other servant of some customer—just give them away as a grocer does a chromo with a pound of tea. If you want them a quarter will pay for the lot."

When the violets saw the coin given and felt themselves lifted from the glass they breathed a sigh of content, and when the clerk, wrapping them in tissue paper, placed them in a pretty box a fragrant breath of excitement escaped them.

"This must be the padded brougham the orchids spoke of to the roses. Think how we were heaped in the corner of a basket this morning! Oh, exclusiveness has its charms!" And they winked contentedly in their soft wrappings.

The crackling of a wood fire—for the spring day was damp—was the next thing the flowers heard as they were lifted out and put in water. At first their eyes were dazed, but after a few moments they absorbed the details of the place.

The big, bare studio looked rather eerie in the approaching dust, and with its half finished canvases, its walls covered with studies in glowing color, it looked more a workroom proper than a home. But it was the home of youthful, ardent and dominating dreams, and as Robert Dorset looked about it in his eyes was a blending of the enthusiasm of genius and the steadfast fixity of purpose that annihilates all obstacles to reach a goal.

"I've always felt I must succeed, even when the impolite and intrusive wolf sat grimly on my door mat," he thought. "And now that Marchmont, the magnate, has just ordered his portrait, I have little to fear."

He walked over to where an unfinished canvas on an easel showed a girl's charming face.

"How different this winter is from last!" he mused. "Then you were my companion at the art classes, my little friend from the country, studying, oh, so faithfully, but painting so badly; this year the protegee of your rich aunt and chronicled in the papers as Miss Delorme, the new beauty. I can understand her ideas when she decided you were worth chaperoning. Her own girls are placed—one the wife of a consumptive lord, the other of a banker close to seventy. Now you are on the auction block, going, going, but not yet gone—not yet, thank heaven!" And the eyes in his pale face had the expression of a soldier in battle. "I've taken Aunt Mary's polite and unmistakable hint that I am to her an unwelcome worshiper at your shrine—'no beggars or artists allowed'—but I may win yet."

He took a letter from his pocket. It showed signs of many readings. Now, with his head thrown back as he lounged in a big chair before the fire's blaze, he read it again:

"This is the last night of the opera, my friend. Why don't you go? I've discovered the ethics of Aunt Mary's campaign, and I know why you come no more. In fact, my visitors are now narrowed exclusively to those who know the merry clip of the scissors as the coupons fall. If I'm right, let's have our vengeance. Go to the old place in the gallery tonight, where I've so often sat with you and Ted and Mabel and will again. We can make eye notes about Melba, with the horseshoe sweeping between us. What fun to cheat Aunt Mary! She thinks, foolish woman, I'm easy to mold because I'm little; but, although I've made no fuss over her treatment of my old friends, I've my own way of getting my own way. I've given aunt her fling with me this winter to please mother, so for the nonce I'm pleasing myself. RUTH.

"Does this mean anything more than chumship? I'll find out tonight."

He took pen and paper and, having written and destroyed several sheets, finally appeared fairly satisfied with one, which he kissed before folding it, his eyes heavy with love.

He put the note, with the flowers, back in the box, while the violets, scenting a romance, fluttered excitedly as they were taken from the studio.

On a table in a pretty boudoir on Madison square a cluster of orchids in an eastern vase and a bunch of wood violets in a small jug waited the coming of Ruth Delorme.

"We beg your pardon," drawled the orchids after a long stare, "but did you come from Brighton's? Are we mistaken, or did we see you there today? It's so hard to tell exactly; you lack individuality, you know."

Rustling with excitement at the meeting, the violets nodded their fragrant heads.

"The same," they answered bravely.

"Well, of all the luck!" broke in the winged aristocrats. "But you'll be sure to make some break and queer yourselves. That's one comfort."

Just then Ruth entered.

She was so daintily lovely in her gown of white, filmy lace. The violets were sure they saw an angel at last. Her eyes were just like themselves, they thought, or as they might look if a star lurked in the heart of each.

In the gloom of the firelit room she did not see the little blue worshipers and carelessly picked up the small envelope beside the orchids.

"A small thing to secrete such weighty, apoplectic adoration," she thought, with a mutinous look, and rapidly glanced over the lines, mumbling them half angrily:

"My Dear Miss Delorme—Your aunt—um—um—given the privilege of speaking to you tonight. You know—um—um—I would say. Will be there at 8. You will be alone—um—um—before we leave—opera. Hope you will wear the flowers—um—um—

"JAMES ARMSTRONG.

"Well, Jeemes," she mocked, "come an you will. No doubt you will have fortified your usual brilliance with an extra glass for the occasion. Your burgundy blush will present the deeper hue of the plum when you get my answer. Ugh! Why can't they let me alone?"

The maid entered, bringing Ruth's carriage shoes, and before putting them on she turned on the electric light, which revealed to Ruth the violets in the shadow of the orchids' vase.

"HE DARED DO IT! THE DARLING—OH, THE DARLING!"

"Where did these come from, Ann?" she asked.

"Oh, Miss Ruth, they came while you were at dinner, not long after the orchids. I hope you'll excuse me. I quite forgot them after putting them in water."

"Where is the card that came with them?" the girl asked more imperiously than she had ever before spoken.

"Why, there was a note. Oh, here it is on the floor."

At sight of the writing Ruth's face grew radiant. She dismissed the maid, and, with lips trembling slightly and fingers not quite steady, she broke the seal and read:

"Ruth, you know all I would say to you if I dared. The words 'I love you' and 'Will you marry me?' so poorly express all I feel, but perhaps your own heart can put the witchery upon them. Tonight I will be in the old place in the gallery and look for my answer. If you wear these little flowers it will tell me that I have not been a mad, rash dreamer and that you love me. If you do not—well, God bless you, anyway—but God help me.

"ROBERT."

Ruth gave a little shiver of delight as she raised the note to her lips.

"He dared do it! The darling—oh, the darling!" she whispered as she caught the violets to her heart.

"Will I marry him? Ah, will I not? And now, my dear aunt, trot out all the eligibles you wish. I'll scan them with comfortable composure. Bob loves me—loves me—loves me!"

Her fingers trembled as she pinned the flowers securely upon her breast, and the orchids looked at them with a furious sneer, scarcely believing their eyes.

"It's rank socialism, putting you out of your place like that," they said spitefully.

"You'd like my place, I dare say," crowed a violet from its vantage point.

"What could one expect from a mere ex-art student?" they retorted. "She's not like us 'classy' people. What does she mean to do with us? I wonder?"

As if in answer Ruth called in the maid.

"Tell William to take these orchids to my little sick girl on East Seventeenth street, near the river; he knows the place. Say I'll be in to see her tomorrow. They will cheer her tonight in that awful tenement."

The clock struck 8, and a few minutes later Mr. Armstrong was announced.

"Goodby!" cooed the violets as Ruth was leaving the room. "So sorry you're going to miss the opera. You'll be gone before we get back or we'd tell you all about it."

"All about what?" snapped the orchids.

"Why, the music, of course."

"That shows what country things you are. No one listens to the music. It's bad form. Besides"—

But the violets lost the rest of the sneer as they went down on Ruth's white bosom to witness the discomfiture of the man of millions with the bibulous flush.

The orchids, left alone, learned the lesson of humility hard.

"We'd rather be dead than lose caste!" they groaned. "A tenement house! Horrors!"

Had they been able they would have given a human shriek when the footman, after tossing one to Ann, flung the rest into a box.

In the morning as they looked at the sick child, felt her hot fingers, saw the expanse of factory roofs and clothes-lines beyond the windows, they grew very blue. As the days went by they grew bluer and bluer.

But the little girl laughed as the stems were clipped every morning and they were put in fresh water.

"Ain't they changed a pretty color, mother?" she said. "They look almost like violets now."

It's Dangerous To Doubt.

You have no right to doubt a thing that has been tested and found to rest on fact. Vin-te-na has cured so many people in so many parts of the country that it is really unjust to predict a failure in any case that has gone beyond the power of medicine.

Vin-te-na purifies the blood and makes the nerves strong and steady. It not only cures disease but safeguards the system against every form of germ disease. Most all diseases are rooted in the blood. Vin-te-na cures the very cause of all blood disorders by destroying the impurities in the blood and giving it purity and warmth. Get it and be strong.

A Suggestion for What it is Worth.

In view of the approaching dedication of the Gov. Curtin and Centre County Soldiers Monument; would it be presumptuous to suggest to those having charge of the arrangements for the same that they consider the advisability:

First: of extending to Theodore Roosevelt the President of the United States an emphatic invitation to honor the occasion with his presence.

Secondly: of preparing for and announcing the celebration of an "Old Home Week" in the same connection for all former sons and daughters of Centre county similar to the late Harrisburg successful celebration.

Turkeys are Scarce.

Turkeys are going to be scarce this year and the bird that is so essential for the Thanksgiving and Christmas dinner is going to be very high in price, at least 20 cents a pound. At least this is the opinion of those interested in the turkey trade.

The cold, damp weather which continued so long last spring and the continuous rainy weather throughout the summer played havoc with the turkeys and as a result they are scarce, not only in this section but in all parts of the country.

Householders can console themselves with the fact that the supply of this year's ducks and geese are very large and will go a long way to make up the deficiency caused by the scarcity of the more popular fowl. Many epicures regard tender duck as the equal of the turkey, while there are [illegible] who believe that chicken [illegible] piece of both with no loss [illegible] pt of the spread.

Penny Will See how the Chestnuts Grow.

C. K. Sober, of Lewisburg, member of the state game commission, will have a distinguished state party as his guests, and on today he took them to his famous chestnut farm in Irish Valley, near Shamokin.

The party will consist of Gov. Pennypacker, State Dairy and Food Commissioner Dr. B. H. Warren and Dr. I. F. Eberhart of Scranton. The inspection of Mr. Sober's chestnut farm is said to hold especial interest for Gov. Pennypacker because of the widespread interest that the cultivation of the paragon nut by a system of grafting has created. Mr. Sober's grove this year is especially prolific of fruit, which, since the few frosts that have occurred, is beginning to drop.

The party will be accompanied to the chestnut farm by Prof. Nelson F. Davis, of Bucknell University, who has had the work of the study of chestnut pests and their extermination for Mr. Sobor for eight or ten years. He has successfully combated the chestnut weevil until the Sober trees are practically free from the worm.

Found in a Trunk

Huron, Oct. 10—The body of Ramon Carmona, manager of a trunk store, was found inside a locked trunk which had been concealed in a remote corner of the store underneath a stairway. The police are hunting for a youth named Jose who had been employed in the store for a month and slept there, and who has disappeared. Carmona had opened the safe, presumably under compulsion, and $2,000 had been taken from it.

Carmona entered the store at the usual hour but later the police were notified that the store had not been opened for business. Several hours later the police found the body which was then warm. Beyond a wounded finger, there was no marks on the body except where the throat had been clutched. It is believed that Carmona was killed by strangulation.
